Six years ago when they brought Mrs. Nellie Olmstead news that her big-salaried husband, Irving E. Olmstead, had murdered Violet Mooers, a Winter street manicurist, the little woman gathered her three beautiful children about her and said:

"I don't desert living in his hour of need. I will do everything in my power to assist him."

Then she went to the Charles street jail, kissed him through the bars and whispered her love.

That love remains. Today, through an attorney, she petitioned the State Pardon Board to free her husband.

FATHER HAD HATED SUITOR FEAR ROXBURY WIFE IS RIVER VICTIM

3 YEARS TO KILL HIM

murder case. But it is not in the plot. The day after this newspaper—which was the only one which carried the story—mentioned Almon Howard, Miss Bertha A. Hutchins, thirty, of Fitchburg, reading of Mr. Howard and his affair with an elderly widow, decided to kill herself.

WADED OUT TO DEATH

This was yesterday. Scores of bathers at Magazine beach in Cambridge, saw the young woman walk out into the water. She kept on walking until the water passed over her head. She never came up.

HOWARD SUICIDE

There was no doubt that it was a suicide. Before taking her walk into the water, it was found, Miss Hutchins had written letters to relatives asking them to come to Fitchburg at once.

PREYED ON 3 CLASSES

Through the story told by Mr. Hutchins and others who came into contact with Mr. Howard, the man is revealed as an adventurer whose operations were aimed always at three types of women.

whose worldly education was inadequate to cope with his wife. Howard is fifty years old, but looks younger. He has reaped thousands of simply-saved dollars from women by the sympathy racket.

SHE WAS A TEACHER

He said his farm in order to finance the quest for vengeance. The pursuit ruined him. He never married up with Howard. While he was looking for the doorman Almon, the mail-bagging adventurer was working his racket on other women.

DEATH ENDS SEARCH

That was the last Hittches heard of him until he read his name in connection with the Tyngham case. The next message was from the police, telling him to come to the morgue to get the body of his daughter.

MRS. GORDON WYNOTT

Beauty contest winner who left her home at No. 14 Warren place, Roxbury, last March and has not been seen since. Her husband fears she is the Merrimac river suitcase victim.

He would not want that Mrs. Carlton called the police and hinted that Howard might know something about the Tyngham river murder. Miss Hutchins read the story, and then she went to Magazine beach and killed herself.

Can a Murderer Ever Escape Punishment?

ARL WANDERER, returned service man, engaged a vagrant to "hold up" his wife and himself, the idea being that later they would divide the loot. When the fake holding was staged, Wanderer shot and killed his wife and the man he had hired for the bogus robbery.

He had two guns. One of them he planted on the body of the man. The other he told the police he used to defend himself. The gun found on the dead man's person was traced in an effort to identify him. It was traced to Wanderer, who was arrested, convicted and executed.

Murders, no matter how carefully they plan their crimes, usually leave some detail open. The Tyngham river murder, which has shocked all New England, seems impossible to solve at this time. But some tiny detail may turn up the criminal.

There are two slender threads to work on.

1—A list of missing persons, in order that the headless, legless victim may be identified. Do you know any women who have been missing for some time?

2—The grip in which the torso was found. Is there any grip of this type of grip, made so cheaply that it carries no mark of the manufacturer?

If you can give information on any of these points, CALL THE CITY EDITOR OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN. The phone number is MAIN-5180. We will follow up every clue, no matter how seemingly trivial it may be.

The Tyngham river murders left some detail uncovered. Help us to locate it and follow it up.

Curry of the person or persons responsible that it will soon be as decomposed as the suitcase victims' or disfigured unless secured by death. Medical experts point out as to be difficult of identification.

The pet project of Mrs. Myrtle Bowman Hayes of Boston, moved into history when the Hotel Chat-ham project, which was in her material form, was sold to a five-million dollar apartment building in Brookline under the hammer in a mortgage foreclosure sale.

Today

Remember Japan
Blaming the Creator
Wages 22 Cents a Week
$40,000,000 Targets

—By Arthur Brisbane—
Copyright, 1932, by New Century

AT THE TIME of the first in San Francisco, Japan contributed to relief funds $254,956, more than the total amount contributed by all other foreign nations.

San Francisco requested no assistance. She built herself up with miraculous speed and energy.

None the less, the generous act of Japan, now as dreadfully afflicted, should not be forgotten. This nation should advance to Japan what she wants more than more individual charity, substantial loans, on most reasonable terms.

COMPLETE DISAPPEARANCE

ANCE of one Japanese island with ten thousand population has not been officially confirmed, but news comes of a new island, thirty miles long, fifteen miles wide, raised above the sea near Yokohama.

EARTHQUAKES AND ALCHEMISTS

Alchemists have taught human beings one thing at least, not to blame the ruler of heaven and earth when things go wrong. In the eighteenth century New Englanders were shaken out of bed at four o'clock in the morning. Governor Phelps began his proclamation ordering a day of fasting and penance as follows: "By having pleased Almighty God in a most awful and surprising manner to manifest His righteous anger against the provoking sins of men by terrible and destructive earthquakes and inundations."

We are not quite so foolish or irreverent now.

SOME GERMAN HAVE BECOME

Alchemists trying to figure out cures, in marks. No wonder. Yesterday, you could buy a million marks for two and a half cents, and even cheaper. German coal miners have agreed to work for nine million marks a week—twenty-two cents in our money. How does that impress American workers? War does not pay, win or lose—especially here.

FLYING MACHINES

Toppling bombs that cost few dollars, have again demonstrated for the benefit of the American people that battleships are obsolete. The old battleship Virginia, used as a target, was sunk in thirty minutes by a fleet of 1000 feet up. How many forty million-dollar battleships will this country build to supply amusing targets some day for foreign fleets? Forty million dollars spent wisely on flying ships, with a few more millions on submarines, could make fighting them unnecessary and attack by any nation foolish.

FOREIGN COUNTRIES KNOW

how to do things that are so much for this glorious republic, where the people rule—or think they do.

In Japan, with people starving, food scarce, prices started to rise. The government gave orders to sell food at cost, and food was sold. AT COST. If it hadn't been, the sellers would have gone below to join the victims of the earthquake in death.

IN EGYPT, THE ITALIAN-GREEK

trouble interfered with trade and threatened the cotton grower.

Immediately the Egyptian government entered the market as a heavy buyer of cotton to protect growers and dealers. Egypt isn't as rich as the United States, by a good many hundred billions, but common sense sometimes is better than money.

KEMAL'S FASHION COMES BACK

to the front page by preventing restoration of the empire in Turkey. It was once as difficult to imagine a Turk without many wives as of a Chinese without a pigtail. The pigtail is gone, and the harem is gone, too. Wise Kemal says that one Turkish wife, of the new woman type, is as much as any one Turk can or ought to own.

CHAPLAIN REED OF THE OHIO

penitentiary has a plan to give convicts education via correspondence school. In their idle hours the convicts will be helped to replace ignorance with knowledge.

That is good work for the convict, even better and more important for the outside world. Crime is based on ignorance. Kill ignorance and you will kill crime—at least such crime as illiterate men commit.

THE TANGLE BARED IN LITTLE BOY'S MURDER

MOTHER AND HIS BOY SECRETLY WOODED

Seven-Year-Old Windham Lad Sacrificed; Series of Tragedies

Windham, N. Y., Sept. 7.—More sharply than ever a hidden love affair stands out as the "cause behind" the murder, on August 29, of Howard Rothenberg, seven-year-old son of Charles Rothenberg, Newark hat manufacturer.

This led to the questioning of John Finkel, known here as a crime master. The authorities learned that during the past summer gossip had linked Finkel with Mrs. Rose Rothenberg, mother of the slain boy, in the same family association that distinguished the acquaintance of Mrs. Ester Litt, the boy's aunt, with Ernest Rothenberg, the boy's father, of the hotel where the dead lad and his mother and aunt was stopping.

CLOSE NET ON SLAYER

With this net and the surrounding territory is in a state of expectancy that the murderer will soon be named, there is hushed discussion of the strange series of tragedies and misadventures that have followed the discovery of the boy, strangled, in a woods near here.

First of all there was the murder of the boy, still unsolved. Then Charles Rothenberg, the boy's father, speeding here from Newark, N. J., on hearing of his death, was in collision with a motorcycle policeman and the policeman was killed.

CORONER DROPS DEAD

A few days later District Attorney Coffin, in charge of the case, collapsed and is dangerously ill. Dr. Charles T. Millberg, Green County doctor, who conducted the first investigation of the murder, dropped dead. Now Mrs. Esther Litt, the boy's aunt, held in a material world, has collapsed and is in the care of a physician.

ASKS PARDON FOR

When Oimstead, a wood salesman, with a beautiful home in Newton, village, fired five shots into the air, he was not thinking of the boy who had been friendly for more than three years. Mrs. Oimstead said: "He was temporarily insane. She held a hypnotic influence over him. He broke him would be un-Christian like. I am a Christian woman."

The Oimstead children, now grown up, are Mary Augusta, twenty years old, Robert T., sixteen, and Joan Marie Oimstead, twenty years.

EYE-WITNESS' STORY OF JAPANESE HORROR

SCENES WORSE THAN WAR'S CARNAGE IN JOURNEY THROUGH BLASTED ZONE

This is the first real eyewitness story of the Japanese earthquake to reach the United States. It was written by a man who lived through the terror of the earthquake.

By DUKE N. FARRY

Universal Service Club.
(Copyright, 1923, by Universal Service)

Kobe, Sept. 4 (Delayed in transmission).—A slight tremor seemed to shake the room in which I was conversing with the commercial attaché of the German embassy in Tokyo at 11:58 o'clock Saturday morning. Dr. Kohn, the German trade commissioner, broke off his discussion with me concerning rumors of the German-Japanese Russian alliance.

To the Public:

All subscriptions received by the American Red Cross, 73 Newbury Street, Boston, in the next week, will be devoted to Japanese Relief unless otherwise designated.

The need for quick action cannot be exaggerated.

W. A. GASTON, Treasurer,

Sept. 6, 1923. Metropolitan Chapter.

Battles Death Four Years; She's Happy on Broadway Again

New York, Sept. 6.—After four years in a world bounded by the walls of a hospital room, Nellie Howell, writer, today went "back home" to Broadway.

Stricken by a spinal trouble that baffled the medical science in 1919, she would not listen to the discouraging stories of her physicians. "Impossible," they said. "No," she insisted, and today she smilingly and tearfully said, "I told you so."

While it has been a great triumph of her will, her recovery was not complete. She went back to her Broadway hotel in an ambulance chair.

And Tokyo was burning in many sections. Fixing my way to the Ginza the Broadway of Tokyo I found it in a panic crowd. With flames poured out from the side streets and no attempt was made to check them. This was because the water mains had been broken.

A routing inferno was directed to the center of the city. The night came with its terrible horrors. Then began the great work of the firemen from the Ginza to the center of the city.

Now was going on a tremendous and dramatic fight and thousands upon thousands of the unfortunate homeless people, with hopes abandoned of obtaining housing, were being hurried by foot, cart and motor car under a sky blazing red with fire.

They did not know that this great report was actually written at the time.

Leaving shortly before midnight, I passed through scores of small villages south of Tokyo and found each one a scene of utter devastation.

The people of each village, kept up to the smoking ruins of the buildings which have been of other villages, and their own wounded. The hospitals in Tokyo were crowded and relief was therefore very difficult.

CONTINUED NIGHTMARE
The sound was heard in the streets in the parks and other open places. The trip from Tokyo to Yokohama was a continual nightmare. Half way between the two cities and the great report I passed in the roadway and saw a great light flash in the distance. It was Yokohama burning.

I looked in another direction and saw the sky lighted from the flames of burning Kawasaki.

In spite of blinding feet and with shoes torn and burned by the hot stones and the sharp barbed wires which had fallen across the roads, I continued on toward Yokohama.

When at last I got a view of what was now a great world report, I saw a wide area resembling a plain under terrible heat in fire war.

SCENES OF TERROR
The streets of Yokohama were filled with sights of terror, the dead covering every corner.

Men were running from the fire the rabbits among out of houses, screaming not without they were bound.

When I reached the waterfront there were great things of all nations waiting for one death to carry them out in the ships in the harbor.

The oppressive and horrid vision of death were before me.

Mr. Kenji, American wife of a noted Cornell man, was being dragged from the wreckage of her home when a sudden burst of flame swept over her and burned her alive, in sight of her friends, who stood by helplessly.

All Sunday the horrible odor of burning bodies filled the air. Water and food became scarce and scarce. The bodies of many Americans have not yet been recovered.

The following is a list of known American dead and missing:
American Consul Max D. Rice, himself and wife.
Paul E. Drake, vice-consul of American consulate.
John Milson and wife.
Mrs. H. E. Root, wife of an American newspaperman, and her twelve-year-old son, Merrill.
Mrs. A. L. Marshall, wife of an American newspaperman, and her twelve-year-old son, Merrill.
Richard Marshall, son of Mrs. Marshall.
E. G. Habbitt, formerly of San Francisco, American commercial attaché.
E. R. Morley, slain by death by further from Boston, manager of the Home International Housing Corporation, Yokohama.
Paul Cannon, American tourist.
M. R. Angella, enlisted man of the American Naval Hospital.
Captain G. P. Simpson, New Brunswick, N. J.
Captain of American steamship, Soma City.
An other, name unknown, of steamship Soma City.

RHODE ISLAND COAL PROVES HALF SLATE

Although latest reports from Japan lead to the hope that the death toll is not as large as has been feared, the destruction wrought by the earthquake, tidal waves and fire has been tremendous.

A dispatch from Shanghai this morning says that information received there today makes it appear that the losses, both in life and property, were "much exaggerated."

Efficient narrow gages, however, had revealed a message from the American consul at Shanghai in the form of a telegram to the American consul at Yokohama, asking for the statement that the city had been virtually destroyed.

LEGLESS, HE HASN'T LOST BACKBONE

William Finnegan, No. 14 Corning street, South End, hasn't got a leg to stand on, but he is determined to get along somehow.

This is literal. Both legs are amputated at the knee.

"A man may be down, but he's never out," says Bill, who in his baseball days with the Twilight League showed promise of becoming big league talent.

A railroad accident cost him his legs.

But it didn't hurt his backbone.

He has never descended to begging. Instead of giving up, he began to study and attempted to fit himself for work which can be done without legs.

In the summer Bill's a vendor of chewing gum. But in the winter that's not possible.

Bill has appealed to the Boston American's helping hand.

"I'm full of determination to obtain some sort of employment. My hands are good, my eyes are good. I've a fair amount of intelligence, a little education and an abiding desire to make my way in the world," he says.

"I'm studying nights and I'd like a job day so that I can live while I improve myself by education. I'm not finicky. I'll take any job offered."

Would lend a hand to the man who hasn't any feet?

LEAGUE MUST ACT OR DODGE IN ITALY'S CRISIS

London, Sept. 7 (U.S.S.)—Six out of ten French newspapers have taken notice at Gibraltar, bearing testimony to the Italian, according to a Central News dispatch from that port today.

Genoa, Sept. 7 (A.P.)—Many of the delegates at the fourth assembly of the League of Nations remark that the climax to the Greek-Italian negotiations will come when the council decides or declines to apply to Italy Article 16 of the league constitution, as a condition of peace.

The Italian continues to insist that the council must act in some way, and the question is being asked whether the executive body will dare apply Article 16, which would mean the cutting off of financial relations of the league states with Italy and a complete economic boycott of the Italian nation.

Delegates also are speculating as to whether members of the league would dare such an injunction, if imposed.

It was expected that today's installment of the league story, which seems to be interrupted with a "to be continued" insertion just when it is to be told of a most thrilling episode, might throw some light on the situation.

BURY GRIFFIN

Two thousand persons attended the funeral of six-year-old Mary Griffin, the only native killed in the Greek bombardment. The shops closed for two hours as a sign of mourning.

Another child has died, bringing the total number of deaths to 12.

A witness of the bombardment who arrived in Athens early this week and that twenty persons had been killed, including sixteen children.

Mussolini Regrets U. S. Unfriendly Criticism

Rome, Sept. 7 (A.P.)—Italy's attitude in refusing to recognize the competence of the League of Nations to intervene in her dispute with Greece should have not only surprised, above all in America, said Premier Mussolini in an interview. He added: "The attempt made to refuse great power like Italy the right to defend her own honor and a tangible demonstration of the danger Americans were the first to detect in this occasion which, far from facilitating a solution or such controversy between Greece and Italy, has made it more difficult and more dangerous."

Italy is firmly convinced of the righteousness of her position, the Premier asserted, and also believes nothing better than the League except as soon as possible her demands for reparation, thus ending the present situation.

Mussolini said he had been particularly impressed by the unjust criticism directed against Italy by some of the American newspapers.

Why Did She Tell Her Husband?

It is true she had promised "to love, honor, and obey him." But he, too, had promised much. Now, as she looks at his thin, aging face, as she listens to his listless voice, as she notices his slow walk, that has a hint of a shuffle in it, she cries from out of the depth of her tortured heart: "I should have lied to him—but I found it out too late."

But, should she have lied to him? What would you do, if after four years of a bitter married life, filled with hateful quarrels, you left your husband on an impulse and found work in a distant city? Lonesome and heart-sick, your youth crying out for companionship, would you listen to the sophistries of a young handsome cavalier? Would you allow him to put his arms around you and kiss you? Would you? Are you really strong enough to resist?

Women are often weak in will power when under the tremendous swaying power of bright lights, pretty clothes and the sympathy of a handsome young man's hand as he meltingly tells her how much he adores her. Would you be tempted under the same condition?

Before you judge—before you decide read "WHAT I TOLD MY HUSBAND," a tremendously impressive human confession in October issue of TRUE STORY MAGAZINE.

Have girls finer sensibilities than men?

Is it true that man would not be as civilized as he is if he had not had the refining influence of woman? That only one low sordid act by a man, who himself, may think of that act in a matter-of-fact way, will, in the instant, change an innocent girl into a woman of scorn? One who feels that the purity of her character has been tarnished—even defiled? That when once such a feeling for a man has gripped her, nothing he can say, nothing he can do, no offering he can propose will ever again restore her trust in him?

Read "THE LONG LANE'S TURNING." Her father born of highest social standing, her mother only a pretty, frivolous country girl of no position. Thrown onto an uncharitable country community at a tender age, sleeping where she could, eating as the neighbors invited her, she grew up a pretty wildflower, but scorned as "poor white trash." Easy prey for an unscrupulous man—perhaps. But, when awakened, a woman of iron will and earnestness of purpose.... a Nemesis who drew the man to his death.

Can a Cold-hearted Beauty Ever Warm to Love?

Resolved to sell herself to the highest bidder, she laughed at love and married the man who had most to offer her financially and in social position. But her gilded cage did not protect her. She fell deeply in love with an artist and changed from an ice-cold, calculating woman into one of flame and passion. When her husband discovered the liaison he claimed a diabolical revenge that thrills with horror. Don't fail to read "SOLD TO THE DEVIL."

"Just Her Mother-in-Law"—Should a bride make her home with her mother-in-law or should she insist on her own home? Is a sea-jelly sure to spring up between these two that will result in bitter hate?

"Betrayed"—Suppose your sister made her home with you and you caught her trying to win your husband's love, would you order her from your home, or hold full confidence in the steadfastness of your husband?

Other Human Life Stories Are

"The Supreme Sacrifice"—By a strange coincidence of fate, he was compelled to either sacrifice his honor, his own choice of happiness, and his sweetheart's love, or wreck his mother's home and shatter all that she held dear.

"A Life for a Love"—Amazing are the tricks a family will play on a son and the girl he loves, if they do not happen to approve of his choice.

"Why I Fooled My Wife"—Can a woman who has been a social butterfly with no other thought than selfish pleasure and extravagances in dress, swiftly change to a drudge, contented to cook, iron, scrimp and save to help her husband regain a lost financial standing.

TRUE STORY amazes all with its honesty—its fidelity to facts. Prudery tries to suppress it claiming it is insincere, but unbiased readers know that every story in this wonderful magazine sparkles with nothing but the truth. Its stories may sound too frank to some ears, but real life is not always lived to well turned words. Life is rough, and hard and cruel. And those who fall into snares—who are trapped—who are defiled—who are betrayed know that the only way others can be shown how to avoid the pitfalls of life is by reading the danger signs left by these victims.

Unless we are to become a people who believe in fairy tales blinded to life through constantly absorbing stories as the fictional writers imagine life to be, unless we are to become a people of childlike simplicity, and unbelief in the bare truth that there are many wolves, many fangs, many devils in the world ready to snap up every innocent morsel that comes near their jaws, we must face the world as it is—life as it is lived. TRUE STORY will show you bitter experience without the need of your living them. If you will heed the unwritten warning that lies in each story, there is no reason why any girl should ever fall into the snares of the tempter. She will know the truth without snatching her modesty. There will be no need for any boy to set his feet on the path that leads to prison, disease and poverty, because he too, will know all of the danger signs and how to avoid them.

"I told you to tell me the truth! Why do you tell me a pack of lies?"

Science Proclaims Man a Mere Mechanical Engine

Startling New Theory Scorns the Soul and Declares a Drop of Water and a Spark Created Human Life, Challenging Both the Scriptures and Darwin

structed on the pattern of the constituent cells, each cell being in itself a tiny electro-chemical mechanism.

A "Wet Battery," Shown at Right, Consists of a Glass Jar Containing Salt Fluid, Sulphuric Acid Solution and Copper and Zinc Poles.

"Ribs" of the Extraordinary Automatic Girl, "Celata," Being Created by Professor Cecil E. Niles in San Francisco, According to a Secret Formula, Said to Be That of the Crile Theory.

LONDON. MAN does not stem from the apes! Neither is man a divinely created soul!

He is simply an "electro-chemical mechanism"—like a gasoline engine—and his exponents, if you please, are nothing but an atom of hydrogen and a negative charge of electricity!

If this astounding theory had been advanced by a crank—or by an unknown dabbler in science—it would scarcely cause a passing laugh.

But it comes instead from Dr. George W. Crile, the great American surgeon, whose international fame includes membership in the Royal British Society, the Royal Academy of Medicine of Belgium, and fifty other scientific societies scattered all over the world, from Vienna, Austria, to Cleveland, Ohio.

He has just exploded it here like a bombshell at a formal session of the International Congress of Surgeons.

Nothing has made such a sensation in the scientific and religious world since the publication of Darwin's "Origin of Species," and a worldwide controversy is bound to result.

In the first place, the Crile theory up-sets all current scientific beliefs as to the nature of life. In the second place, it arouses the bitter disapproval of all religious people who believe in the Biblical story of man's origin. If they objected to the evolutionist's theory that man is a "higher animal" descended from the anthropoid ape, they object a thousand times more bitterly to the idea that he is merely a piece of machinery.

Dr. Crile's theory, simply stated, is that the origin of all life forms was an atom of hydrogen combined with a negative electron, one of the particles which are the cause of all electrical phenomena.

"Life," declared Dr. Crile, "is a flame burning in water."

Phrased more simply still, what he meant was that life began as a flick of gas, set on fire by an electrical spark.

Dr. Crile threw on a screen twenty-four drawings and diagrams to illustrate his argument—first, the spark, the hydrogen, then the spark with the negative electron, the source of an energy which, he held, did not come from heat or light or gravitation.

"Now," said the famous expert to his astonished colleagues, as he showed them a red and yellow splash on the screen, "the living process begins at the point where this potential power is developed, and when there is an intervening membrane which has electrical conductivity."

The membrane was clear enough as he pictured it, but learned professors caught their breath when he said that the membrane which separated the chemical flame from the electric force was one ten-millionth of a centimeter in thickness.

Thus did man, he argued, who is now a composition of trillions of these first gas atoms, begin his career through the vastness of time.

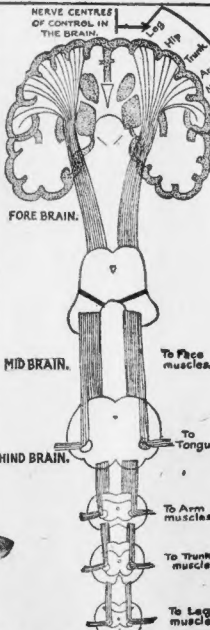

He described how, according to his view, this first spark, gradually developed into the amoeba, or living cell, the stage at which inorganic chemistry becomes organic; then into the starfish, the insect, the electric fish, the salamander, the lungfish, until at last, through evolution, man appeared.

Dr. Crile does not deny the theory of animal evolution as it is taught in practically all modern universities and schools, that evolution began at the bottom with a living cell and goes up through the stages of fish, reptiles, birds and apes to man. Dr. Crile simply goes a step behind the living cell and declares that it first came from the electric spark and the drop of hydrogen, and that, hence, the life that has resulted is electro-chemical in its nature.

"Both man and the animals," he said, "are electro-chemical mechanisms, con-fluid, sulphuric acid in solution—and in this jar two poles, one of copper and one of zinc.

Now by Dr. Crile's theory, your skin is the jar. The fluid is your blood, and the water in your body—both of being a piece of copper and a piece of zinc, are your brain and your liver.

It must be repeated that such simplification cannot be absolutely accurate. His theory is much more complicated. But this comparison gives you a fair general idea of it.

Dr. Crile continues: "The functions of the liver is of foremost importance in this hypothesis, and the effects of that organ on the brain, whether in sickness or health, are at once apparent."

"The theory explains the interference with digestion by the strong emotions—pain, for example. It explains the effects of fear and faith, and the failure in the health of man or animal under the stress of chronic fear or anger, anger or other strong emotion."

"It also explains the essential function of sleep as the period during which the difference is potential in the batteries which drive the organism's restored after being decreased by the activities of the day."

In other words, while you are sleeping you are recharging the battery, which is your whole body.

While Dr. Crile's theory, formally announced in its entirety, came as a great shock to the world, it has really been developed by him very slowly over a period of many years.

If you have the curiosity to go to a library and look up his works, or to read about him in "Who's Who in America," you will find that as far back as 1912, eight years ago, he published a book called "Man, an Adaptive Mechanism," and, in 1916, another, called "The Kinetic Drive."

In both of these he established analogies, likenesses, between the vital animal force and the force of electricity.

Just how this theory can be fitted into the idea that man has will-power, and a soul, and perhaps immortality, will prove an added interesting chapter in the long-drawn-out so-called "warfare of science and religion."

However, this new theory of Dr. Crile does not necessarily discredit either the theories of evolution on the one hand or of revealed religion on the other.

It simply goes, right or wrong, another step further back toward the process of creation.

Many learned preachers and many learned scientists deny that there is any real conflict between science and religion. The point is this: Modern science teaches that man, like all other animals, gradually evolved, through millions of years, from lower forms of life, beginning with the amoeba, or simplest cell-like form of life, graduating up through fish, reptiles, mammals, anthropoid apes, to flower as last in mankind.

This, according to science, was the long, slow "method" of creation. But as to what the power was behind it, what started and governed and directed this long process, science is as absolutely ignorant as a savage, and frankly says, "We do not know." On that final question, it leaves the answer to metaphysics or religion.

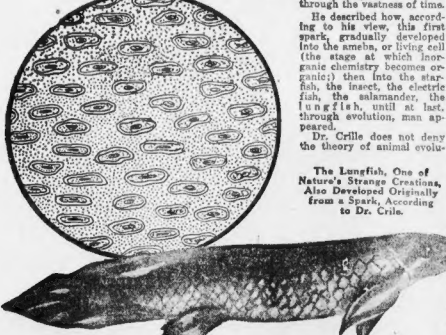

The orthodox religious thinker, on the other hand, contends that the method and process of creation were otherwise. He believes that the Almighty, by a direct act, created man whole and complete, as a separate and different creature from all other living things.

Here seems to be, indeed, a conflict. But many modern ministers say, "We know nothing, after all, about the real origin of life—all we know is the process after it gets started—and the beginning may well be something like that idea in which religious people believe."

And many scientists say, "We know nothing, after all, about the real origin of life—all we know is the process after it gets started—and the beginning may well be something like that idea in which religious people believe."

Dr. Crile himself has made no statement bearing on this phase of the subject, but a thing that people are slow to understand is that a man who promulgates and believes such a "mechanistic" theory, can conceivably at the same time be a man who believes in the highest ideals and destinies of the human race.

The point is that it would be just as easy to create a divine power to breathe the breath of life into a drop of water and a spark as it would be to do the same with a handful of earth.

Remember the Time--

By Jack Casey

Remember the time when you were a kid and you were always getting frustrated when you tried to look the ice cream freezer from the back porch when your sister gave a party? And how you tried to peek from the trees at the side of the house when some guy got up an' said "Asleep in the Deep" or "Hello Gray" or "Goodby Lolly, I Am Lolly"; and just as he hit a double note you'd make noise like "dyin' cats" an' pretend the singer was in great agony?

Yes, picked cherries for the old lady on Rock street, an' she said she hoped you was honest an' so forth, an' yer said yer sure was, so she gave yer the job an' yer scrounged up the tree, an' at the end of two hours' hard work yer came down an' stepped on her cherries, an' she gave yer a quarter for yer work, an' said yer was a nice, bright, honest boy, an' beamed on yer all the way down the street.

You'd walk on fences from one yard to another, an' the way yer'd walk would be to keep one foot on top the fence an' the other on the rail inside so that on a breeze fence yer looked like one yer was shorter than the other. An' yer'd make a pole out of a broomstick an' make a pole out of a broomstick with both feet on top the fence an' be down fine until some guy shook the fence.

When you'd of the game was lookin' yer'd jump rope with the an' let 'em see "ropes" an' let 'em see how fast yer could jump. An' just as yer was goin' real good the game would have come round an' catch yer, an' then yer'd get hellbent for a week.

Copyright International Features Service Inc. RANTING ABOUT THE WEATHER.

You fuss and squatter about your office because of the heat. You remove everything in an effort to be cooler. You wonder at the complacency of others, why they do not worry about the "raucosity of the air" as you do, why they can stand it to keep so much clothing on when you cannot do it?

These persons are perhaps no cooler than you would be if you were not fussing and fretting so much about the heat. It is not easy to add to the discomfort of sultry weather by worrying and fuming about it! But this is exactly what you do. Summers are always warm and you have not the power to change them.

There are many disagreeable things about you and your circumstances and your relations to others which you cannot change if you would, but it makes you too much trouble to do it. Then why be so stupid as to rant about the weather which comes anyway, whether or not?

While on a stay at Hunanook Beach, Hunanook, Mass., one of the party asked in a joking manner, "Why can't you dig clams at high tide?" I had a neighbor who hadn't very much work to do. She would call on me frequently as soon as I began my work. One day I heard her knock at the door, but I did not answer it. After a few moments, I stood up and peeked through the keyhole right into my neighbor's eye. MISS JERRY J. SULLIVAN, P. O. Box, 223, West Warren, Mass.
